Hedra Strengthens Senior Team to Focus on Utilities and Energy Consulting Market

Leading management consulting and transformation service company, Hedra plc, has announced that it has further strengthened its service offering with an additional focus on the Utilities and Energy market.

Hedra has secured an experienced team of people from major consulting organisations with detailed knowledge and experience of providing consulting services in the Utilities and Energy sector. The move comes as part of Hedra's growth strategy to move into the Utilities and Energy market, with this sector closely aligning itself to Hedra's current services in both the public and private sectors.

Commenting on the new team, Stephen Farrell, executive board director at Hedra plc said: "Over the past 24 months we have experienced a significant increase in the level of enquiries from companies within the Utilities and Energy sector. Strengthening our business with the introduction of a dedicated Utilities and Energy team is an important step for Hedra and is consistent with our growth strategy of building our commercial business with focus on specific sectors. We welcome the team to Hedra and the substantial sector experience and contacts they bring with them."

Phil Leonard, Director at Hedra, who will Head the Utilities and Energy sector commented: "We are all excited at the prospect of accelerating the growth of Hedra by building a first class consulting service for the Utilities and Energy market. The team have a track record of successful delivery in the sector and being able to utilise the strong delivery capability at Hedra will provide a very strong, competitive offering to the Utilities and Energy sector."
